'Unreserved Backing'

"Bearing this in mind and also the assurance by the five Western powers on the Security Council that their proposals are now in a final and definitive form, and that the five are giving them their unre-served backing, the South African government accepts these proposals," Mr. Vorster said.

The Western plan calls for elections, the release of Namibian poand the guerrilla-backed South-West African People's Organization, a joint UN-South African interim administration, and n reduced South African security force.

The proposals must still win the approval of Sam Nujoma, whose SWAPO is seen at the United Nations as the "sole authentic repre-sentative" of the Namibian people in light of its II-year guerrilla struggle against South Africa. Then they must be approved by the Security Council.

The Green in Cape Verde Remains in Name Only

ILHA DO SAL, Cape Verde-Probably the most ill-fated of all African nations, Cape Verde - the Green Cape — is struggling for survival against cruel odds. The last time that rain fell here with anything but a teaser quantity was nine years ago.

The people are killing nff their cattle, and the production of corn, the staple diet, has all but withered away. As they have done during other droughts and famines that have ravished the islands for generations, the people are moving to distant lands. Once they leave, they do not return.

Servicemen In U.K. Will Get a Raise

LONDON, April 25 (AP)-British servicemen, whose low pay has been the cause of widespread resignations, will get a raise, Prime Minister James Callaghan said today.

Mr. Callaghan told the House of Commons that servicement would get a 14-per-cent raise immediately and a further 18per-cent increase during the next two years. This would bring servicemen's pay up to current civilian levels, if inflation and civilian pay increases are frozen, he said.

The British Army is one of the worst paid in Europe, with 5 of 12 NATO countries paying privates more than Britain pays its lieutenants, who earn the equivalant of $136 a week.

The increase will mean about an extra £7 ($12.60) a week for privates, £9 ($16.20) for corporais and £10 ($18) for sergeants. In line with the Labor government's policy of limiting raises to 10 per cent to fight inflation, the across-the-board pay raise will be 10 per cent and the addibe an increase in the "X" factor - the British term for hardships of military life.

NEW YORK, April 25 (UPI)-President Carter would defeat former President Gerald Ford if the 1976 election were held again,

In its first test for the 1980 presidential election, the organization polled 1,005 adults who voted in the 1976 election and found that the black vote is the key to Mr. Carter's early lead. Blacks said that they would vote for Mr. Carter by an overwhelming margin of 81 per cent to 10 per cent, the poll said.

Mr. Carter would carry the vote of those who make less than $10,000 a year by 56 per cent to 37 per cent. He also has strong support among the unions, the big cities, and the Catholic population, the survey reported.

Regionally, the President would hold a substantial lead in the East and in the South, areas that were pivotal to his 1976 victory. Despite a very negative job rating, Mr. Carter holds a margin of 52 per cent to 38 per cent in the East and a margin of 54 per cent to 38

Latin Americans Now Top List of U.S. Immigrants

WASHINGTON, April 25 (UPI)—Europeans are coming to the United States more as tourists than as immigrants, while Latin Americans and Asians are now the argest immigrant groups, a State Department report shows.

The study, covering the period from fiscal years 1965 through 1976, shows that Latin Americans formed the largest group of immi-grants. However, the rate of immi-grants from Asia, particularly Fili-pinos, Koreans, Chinese and Indians, increased quickly and their total may soon surpass the Latin Europeans, together with Japanese and Canadians, make up the bulk of the 3.7 million tourists and other nonimmigrants who visited the United States in 1976.

The report by the State Department's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs shows that 377,896 persons entered the United States on immigrant visas in 1976, an increase of 90,000 over 1965 but slightly below the figures for 1973, and 1974, A total of 145,906 Latin Americans and 142,282 Asians were admitted during fiscal year 1976. Desai Attacks Any U.S. Delay On Atomic Fuel

NEW DELHI, April 25 (NYT)-Prime Minister Morarji Desai said yesterday that a U.S. refusal to supply fuel to the Tarapur atomic pow-er plant near Bombay would be a hreach of agreement between the two countries and would free India "to ndopt any course we like to safeguard our own interest."

Mr. Desai, participating in a de-bate in the upper bouse of Parliament on the reported decision of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission to block further shipments of enriched uranium to the U.S.-built plant, said he viewed "the delay with considerable disquiet and

He added, however, that the U.S. government had not yet hreached the agreement but only delayed the supply and that be would take up the issue during his visit to the United States in June. He refused to comply with an opposition demand to cancel the visit as a protest. He said he was going to the United States to attend a disarmament conference and did not believe in a policy of "tit for tat."

The commission, which met in Washington during the weekend, turned down India's long-pending request for immediate shipment of 7.6 tons of the fuel despite the fact that the administration had recommended it. Under U.S. procedure. President Carter could overrule the decision and authorize the shipment, but this would be subject to the approval of Congress and involve further procedural delays.

If, for example, he has assumed the role of an artisan, he must leave home every day before eight in the morning and not return before 12:30 p.m., go out again at 2 p.m. and return home at 7 p.m. or after. This means that every comrade must organize his own work according to regular hours ... The role assumed must be carefully studied so that any irregularities in one's hehavior can be explained."

The manual provides that documents, weapons and other organizational materials be kept in suitcases ready for quick getaway. Every month, it says, the contents of the dwelling should be reviewed to "elean out all useless, dangerous or compromising materials."

Among the things found in the third-floor apartment, uncovered because the downstairs neighbor complained about a leak, was a register showing that $20,000 had been paid to huy weapons from regular gun shops.

There also were false Italian and foreign license plates, uniforms thought to have been used by the Moro kidnappers, wigs, wnmen's dresses, a large stock of canned food and blank stationery from Rome police headquarters.

Also found in the apartment was currency that police said they could identify as being from ransoms paid in several kidnappings. One of the rare successful police infiltrators into the Red Brigades, Silvano Gisoho, recently testified that Renato Curcio, the founder of the group who is on trial in Turin with 14 others, complained about the high costs of keeping people underground

The organization apparently works very efficiently. The Italian police say that documents found in the Via Gradoli apartment show that the Moro kidnapping involved the clockwork cooperation of about 60 persons - 12 for the attack on the five Moro bodyguards who were killed, two groups of five to getaway, and eight drivers. The documents indicated that 30 persons are involved in holding Mr. Moro, police said.

Like the oil-blackened rocks they are working to restore to pinkness and whiteness, each volunteer must be sprayed clean before giving up for the day.

More than 500 kilometers of beach and about 400 kilometers of rocky coastline is covered with thousands of tons of oil from the Amoco Cadiz, the Liberian tanker which hit the rocks near Portsall in western Brittany on March 10.

Volunteers from France, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland, as well as thousands of French soldiers, have been painstakingly cleaning the beaches and rocks from the consequences of the socalled black tide. Court Says Birching Punishment By Isle of Man Was Degrading

STRASBOURG, April 25 (AP)—The European Court of Human Rights ruled today that the Isle of Man was guilty of degrading punishment when its constable beat young lawbreakers with birch The decision, handed down hy Judge Giorgio Palladarore Pallithat the Isle of Man's Parliament believes that birching is an effective way to control crime, and that 70 per cent of the island's 45,000 voters agree. The court's ruling has only moral force. Britain, which cootrols the Isle of Mans foreign affairs, already has expressed disapproval of the birching law. However, it is up to the Parliament in the capital of Manx to review the law. The island retains birching for certain crimes for offenders up to age 21. After his beating in 1972, Anthony Tyner brought suit charging that it is illegal under the European Convention for Human Rights that bars torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. The court ruled that birching was neither torture or inhuman, but found that it constituted an attack on Mr.

Neutral Indonesia Hopes To Normalize China Ties

By Henry Kamm

JAKARTA. (NYT)—The main concern of nonaligned and insular Indonesia in foreign policy is to normalize its frozen relations with China while insuring that Peking will not attend to use the overseas will not attempt to use the overseas Chinese minority to subvert President Subarto's government.

"This is the bub of the difficulties." said Foreign Minister Mocbtar Kusumaatmadja. "This is the crux. We must talk to them to clarify this."

"If you ask me," said Vice-President Adam Malik, a former foreign minister, "it is psychological, it is a question of security. The overseas question of security. The overseas Chinese, are they really loyal to you or not? Nobody knows that."

The number of Chinese or Indonesians of Chinese origin is thought to be 3 million in a nation of 135 million. Nearly a million are clittens of China about 800 000 are citizens of China, about 800,000 are stateless and the rest, except for a small number holding Taiwanese passports, are Indonesian citizens.

Important Economic Role

The foreign minister said that, while the Chinese community does not make up a large proportion of the population, its role in com-merce and economic life is great. A diplomat said that it is generally es-umated that the Chinese control 80 per cent of private capital here. Chinese businessmen are thought to have close financial links in the power structure, which is in the grip of the military.

In the general atmosphere of normalization of relations between Communist and non-Communist countries in Asia since the U.S. withdrawal from Indochina, Jakarta evidently feels that it cannot indefinitely continue the freeze with Peking that set in after the attempted coup in 1965, for which, military men believe. China was greatly responsible, With three of Indonesia's four partners in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations enjoying full diplomatic relations with China and with Indonesia also concerned with reinforcing its image as a founding member of the no-naligned bloc, some improvement in relations between the two countries appears certain.

Some Contacts

Mr. Mochtar noted that for the first time Indonesia participated in the Canton trade fair and that sports officials attended meetings in China as observers. "This is just a start," he said. Alluding to the High officials do not believe that haste is necessary because, as one said, "China needs relations more than we need them." China, it is said, is anxious to forestall what it sees as Soviet attempts to encircle it. Soviet-Indonesian relations are coolly formal, although the Soviet Embassy is heavily staffed.

Indonesian concern has been stimulated by Chinese statements to the effect that, although overseas Chinese should be good citizens of the countries in which they live. Pe-king considers all Chinese abroad as kinsmen with whom it wisbes to nurture good relations.
While China is the principal focus of Indonesian thinking on foreign policy, officials, particular-ly those concerned with military and security matters, are studying the growing strength of Vietnam and the aftermath of the Communist victories in Indochina.

Jakarta appears reassured by what it sees as a pragmatic ntutude in Hanoi, with which the Indonesians maintained a "correct" diplomatic relationship without substance throughout the war. A ranking security official, while stating that be did not see Vietnam as a threat to Indonesian security at present, expressed a hope that the United States would resist Vietnamese demands for large-scale economic aid.

"The United States should proceed gradually toward Vietnam," a senior civilian official said.

The high officials questioned expressed concern over the security situation of Thailand, a member of the Southeast Asian association — the others are Malaysia, the Philip-pines and Singapore, the last of which also has no diplomatic ties with China. Thailand's problems with Communist insurgents and Cambodian incursions are viewed as indicative of a continuing threat

BEIRUT, April 25-Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat reportedly has headed off a major challenge to his leadership with the expulsion and detention yesterday of a leading figure in his el-Fatah guerrilla group.

Suit Against Raytheon Contends

By Judith Miller .

WASHINGTON. April 25 (NYT)—The Raytheon Company, one of the nation's leading weapons manufacturers, has funneled large sales commission payments to a Saudi Arabian prince without disclosing the payments as required by law, according to a civil suit recently filed in U.S. District Court here. The complaint charges that the Raytheon Co. and the Raytheon Service Co., a wholly owned subsidiary, have "conspired with other parties in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere" to make indirect and direct payments to Prince Abdallah al-

Faisal al-Saud, the eldest son of the late King Faisal, since 1971.

The suit was filed by Mohammed Habib, a Washingtonbased consultant and agent, who claims that Raytheon has deprived him of about $15 million in com-mission payments on sales of Hawk missiles systems and other services to Saudi Arabia.

The Soviet Union Today

What is it that accounts for the crudeness so often evident in the Soviet government's dealings with foreigners, even-especiallyon issues that don't matter much? We have no good explanation but we take note, in a mood of sadness tinged by anger, of two recent episodes in this vein.

fn one. a Korean Airlines plane that had strayed far off course over the northern area of the Soviet Union was shot up by a Soviet interceptor. Two passengers were killed and others wounded; all 100-plus aboard could easily have been lost. Why did the Soviet pilot shoot up an unarmed civilian aircraft? Is that what the Russians regard as vigilance? Or bravery? The authorities, saying that they are investigating, have yet to release the Korean pilot and navigator. But it is Soviet performance that ought to be investigated. It was inexcusable.

In a second incident, Soviet police roughed up a Soviet woman and her daughter wbo were demonstrating outside the U.S. Embassy to publicize the Kremlin's refusal to let them join the woman's American husband of four years, Woodford McClellan. The Russians then refused to transmit photos and television film of the demonstration, relenting only a day later. It is heartless of the Russians, and contrary to their pledges in the Helsinki agreement, to keep the McClellans apart. ft is repressive, and similarly contrary to Helsinki, for them to interfere with the reporting of news. If that is what the Russians intend to do when the international press corps arrives in Moscow for the 1980 Olympics, then the United States and other Western countries should be building a structure of precedent to deal with the press incidents likely to arise at that time. Meanwhile, the Kremlin must be kept under steady pressure to permit the reunification of families split by the Soviet frontier.

It is, some say, unhelpful to criticize the Russians on these matters: ft gets their pride up, it recalls the cold war. Nonsense. When people are needlessly killed or injured, when their lives are broken, then pointed criticism is fair, morally necessary and, in our judg-ment, politically useful in order to encourage more responsible behavior the next time around. These incidents do not involve sensitive internal affairs in which the claim of outsiders to interfere is debatable. They impinge directly on foreigners. If foreigners don't speak up, the crudities will go on.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Turkey's Cyprus Offer

Turkey responded promptly with new Cyprus proposals within days of the administration's request to Congress to lift the arms embargo on Ankara without demanding prior Turkish commitment on Cyprus. In this sense the Turks met their share of the bargain that the administration had implied in deciding to unlink the Cyprus issue and the embargo issue. For the years that the two issues have been linked, Cyprus has re-mained half-occupied by the Turkish forces that invaded in 1974, and the embargo has weakened Turkey's defenses, curdled its taste for friendship and defense cooperation with the Unites States. Clearly, the time was ripe for a new approach.

Yet the new Turkish proposals do not nec-essarily signify the beginning of the end of either the Cyprus crisis or the NATO crisis in the eastern Mediterranean. The reason lies in the nature of those proposals, which cover the prospective territorial and constitutional relationship between Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriot minority. As opening positions for a negotiation—and this is what the lurks privately said they were—they had a certain validity. The United Nations' Kurt Waldheim, the agreed middleman in the Cyprus situation, pronounced them "concrete and substantial." He did not, however, find them sufficiently fair and promising to ask the Cypriots to negotiate on them. And the Cypriots, upon receiving the proposals from Mr. Waldheim in Vienna, went back to Nicosia and denounced them as "an effort to use the method of negotiation ... under the chairmanship of the U.N. Secretary-General, for the consolidation of faits accomplis." So it does not seem that Mr. Waldheim has much choice but to go back to the Turks and ask them to look again at their offer.

Whatever he decides—and it should be known soon-Americans ought to keep a couple of things in mind. First, negotiations, Balkan-style, haveresumed: The new Turkish package and the Cypriot rejection of it constitute part of a process that should be recognized and encouraged for the public sparring that it is. Then, this is not the moment for Americans to jostle the process, least of all by pushing quickly toward a showdown over the arms embargo. In such a premature showdown, the administration would quite likely lose, and that would doom all hope for Turkish relenting on Cyprus. Neither should supporters of the embargo leap to condemn Turkey for its first offer. An American public rebuke for the new Ecevit government's first steps on Cyprus could ensure it will attempt no more. It is time for coolness and responsibility on all sides, and for crossed fingers.

The tide of military rule in Latin America is receding. In the next three months three countries are scheduled to move back toward civilian government, Peru ... Ecuador ... Bolivia ... In other countries, too, the drift away from government by the army is being felt ... Chile ... Argentina ... Brazil ...

Even in those countries where military rule is closely entwined with family tradition, as in Nicaragua, which the Somoza family has been ruling since the early 1930s, there have this year been strong calls for a move to civilian government. Today it appears that only the least developed countries of the region, like Paraguay ... are making no move toward civilian rule.

The reasons for this widespread shift in politics are not difficult to find. In the first place the military have shown themselves to be no more competent than civilian politicians in tackling the problems of develop-ment which all the republics of Latin Ameri-

In the second place, President Jimmy Carter's policies on Latin America have been having their effect. Over the past year the White House has seen to it that those governments which bave consistently disregarded the U.S. human rights initiations have felt Washington's disfavor...

If all goes well the swing away from military rule and toward civilian administration in Latin America could accelerate from now on. If it does, Washington and Brussels (seat of the European Economic Community) will be under something of an obligation. Having censured the military, they will be bound to give ear to reasonable requests for economic and financial assistance from the civilians.

Settlement for Cyprus

It is in everybody's interest—NATO's and the West's, Turkey's and, above all, the people of partitioned and occupied Cyprusthat a settlement is reached and reached soon. Cyprus has been divided now for four years and, with every month that passes, the realities on the ground become more real. and intolerable ...

Squeezing rather than bullying is the key to the operation. Turkey has been under almost unanimous censure from the United Nations since 1974, with no visible effect. The U.S. arms embargo has signally failed to push Turkey-except, rather unconvincingly-toward Moscow. Internally, Turkey remains unstable, touchy and proud. If Turkey does give ground now-as must happen-it will be because it is persuaded and not because it is compelled to do so. That is the bitter truth which Nicosia must accept. -From the Guardian (London).

SALT Needs Genuine Detente

Nobody can really be sure that the Russians do not regard the SALT negotiations as a gigantic game of hide-and-seek, with one player inhibited by decadent capitalistic moral scruples, at the end of which Moscow can suddenly lay its cards on the table to disclose an overwhelming strategic superiority. The main problem for the Americans in strategic arms limitation is the authoritarian nature of the Communist regime, with its rigorously concealed decision-making processes and its consistent refusal to permit freedom of movement. The biggest obstacle to an effective SALT-2 pact is the inevitable mistrust involved in dealing with an unpredictable adversary.

GENEVA-Automobilism is not encouraged in this country, as the Swiss have an idea, and rightly so, that there is too great a danger of accidents in the mountainous districts. In all the cantons the speed is regulated by law-at 40 kilometers an hour. They also have an idea to estahlish a group of expert drivers who will pilot the cars over the dangerous roads.

Off Limits for the French Communists:

By Norman Jacobs

PARIS—On April 13. Le Monde elements of the population can the published the first of a series of three articles by Communist hisgrow in the large urban centers..." of three articles by Communist historian Jean Elleinstein entitled "From the 22d French Communist Party Congress to the Defeat of the Left."

In an opening paragraph, the au-thor explains how the series came to be published in Le Monde: "I should have liked to publish these articles in my party's press," wrote Elleinstein, "but it would seem that this is not possible in the present state of affairs. I beg the comrades who might hold it against me for doing what I am doing to consider the reasons ... and to reflect on the arguments 1 shall present rather than anathematize the Communist intellectual about to present his confidences in a non-Communist newspaper. Isn't this precisely one of the problems posed by the evolu-tion of the French Communist

Simple Reason

Why was it "not possible" for Elleinstein to publish his articles in his party's press? For the simple reason that its statutes, as interpret-ed by the leadership, do not permit a free-forum critical discussion of policy in the party press except during specified periods preceding a Congress. And so, despite widespread discontent over the conduct of the legislative election campaign and despite discussions at the cell level that, according to Georges Marchais, are "beyond precedent," L'Humanite, the party oewspaper, has been closed to critical party members. The result is that they have been going "off limits" and expressing their views in non-Communist newspapers and magazines such as Le Monde, Le Matin and

Of this rather substantial amount of material, Jean Elleinstein's series in Le Monde—which runs 10 some 5,000 words—is thus far the most significant. Elleinstein's basic concern is to analyze why the French Communist party is unable to extend its influence beyond the working class to win over new segments of the salaried middle class and the intellectuals and why, in fact, it appears to be losing ground to the So-cialists in appealing to these ele-ments of the French electorate. In Elleinstein's view the basic causes are threefold.

First, the French Communist party's analysis of Soviet realities is sorely inadequate. "L'Humanite," states Elleinstein, "continues to prestify that reality and conceals much that is essential to an under-standing of what is occurring in the Soviet Union ... Soviet foreign polisoviet Union ... Soviet foreign poli-cy. for example, vis-a-vis Africa or China is rarely criticized. It seems to me that unless we have a princi-pled position on the Soviet Union, our inadquate criticisms (of Soviet policy) will hardly seem credible and will only bewilder party mili-tants without convincing anyone who is not a party member ... who is not a party member ...

"We must have the courage to recognize," Elleinstein concludes, "that socialism exists in a most imperfect fashion in the Soviet Union ... because the bureaucracy is domi-nant there and political democracy model nor an example of socialism: it is rather an anti-model."

"The Soviet Union is neither a Second, according to Elleinstein, French Communist policies have failed to keep pace with the social evolution that has transformed France in the past quarter of a century. In concentrating on serving the interests of the poorest segments of French society, the French Communist party has not been sufficiently aware of the fact that living conditions have im-proved significantly for the majority of workers, who are increasingly interested in enhancing the quality of their lives. No less important, the party has virtually ignored elements in the population that it must attract if it is to prosper. "We must," says Elleinstein, "radically change party policy and appeal to salaried workers in the middle class, to intellectuals, engineers, technicians and managerial personnel ... We cannot oppose the interests of the working class to those of the middle class and the intellectu-als. Only by uniting these different

Needs Overhaul

Finally, Elleintsein argues that democratic centralism, the system by which the party has been gov-erned, its policies determined and its leadership chosen, is in need of drastic overhaul. As practiced hith-erto, says Elleinstein, democratic centralism has been more marked hy centralism than by democracy. And he proposes a series of reforms that would permit a genuinely democratic determiniation of party policy, along with a new system of choosing candidates for party office and for the governing party bodies which "would permit true democracy within the party."

Io times not too far distant.

Elleinstein would have been swiftly expelled from the party for publish-ing his views in a non-Communist oewspaper. Thus far oothing has happened to him and to the many other party members who have good outside party channels to voice their criticisms, and, accord-ing to Marchais, nothing will. "There will not be a single expul-of L'Humanite, blandly noted that the party's 22d Congress had opted for a socialism built to conform to French conditions, but he pointed-ly evaded passing any judgment on the state of socialism in the Soviet the state of socialism in the Soviet Union. And while denying critics access to L'Humanite. French Communist party leaders or their proxies have been daily using the columns of the paper to defend their policies and deny any responsibility for the left's defeat in the legislative elections.

s But whether Elleinstein's reformist views will have any positive influence on party policy is another matter. Asked to comment on Elleinstein's criticisms of French Communist party policy toward the Soviet Union. Rolanda is defined to the party line in the party line; or that what is more important in the legislative elections. All this suggests reason to doubt that, barring the unexpected, the party Central Committee at its forthcoming meeting today and to-morrow will heed those calling for a change in the party line; or that what is more important, the system of "democratic" centralism by which the party line is set and the party leadership chosen is to be modified in any significant way.

Europe, Through Fresh Eyes

By Edmund Stillman

PARIS—Perceptions of international reality are for the most part 10 or 20 years out of date. That Americans went to war in Southeast Asia because we did not realize that monolithic Communism-Stalin's Communism-had long since disappeared is part of the conventional wisdom by now. But how up-to-date are our perceptions of modern Europe?

Hardly a single element in Washington's policy toward Europeand Europe's policy toward itselftakes account of the last 20 years. Yet the Atlantic Alliance, arms control, the Common Market trade, and dollar policy are all vitally effected. Washington—and-Common Market capitals, cling to what the late Christopber Dawson, the distinguished British historian, termed "the dwarfing of Europe."

All Changed

Mr. Dawson said in a dispirited postwar essay: "Today all is changed. Not only is Europe reduced to insignificance by the giant powers to which she has given birth, but it is difficult to find any people, however weak and back-ward, who will admit her claim to cultural superiority. Even people who emerged only yesterday from the darkness of ... barbarism now regard themselves as culturally equal or superior ro the old western lords of the earth.

Yet consider the following: Europe today is far from being dwarfed. Today the original Com-mon Market Six (West Germany,

In describing the backround of Helsinki, he did not go back far enough. Molotov first proposed a European conference, designed to put the seal of approval oo the division of Germany, at the Big Four conference of foreign ministers in Berlin in 1954.

The gross national product of the Nine (adding Britain, Denmark and Ireland) is as large today as scale-trade more and more with one another and less and less with the United States. So far from being a major "locomotive" for the European economies, the United States imports less from the Common Market Nine than do Sweden and Switzerland together. Within the Common Market, Belgium alone buys more (nearly 15 per cent more) from its partners than does the United States.

 Four European countries— Sweden, Switzerland, Norway and Denmark—have a higher standard of living than the United States, even when measured in purely tangible money terms, without taking into account add-ons like free health care and general old-age pensions. For nearly all, the gap has been closing fast. From approx-imately one-third the U.S. level of individual wealth in 1950, France and West Germany had closed to and West Germany had closed to more than three-quarters the U.S. standard of living by 1976.

 Finally, as a rough indication of quality of life, the majority of West Europeans live longer than Americans. Considering infantmortality rates alone, standards of health care have dramatically over-taken those in the United States. In 1950, the United States led in in-fant care with 29.2 deaths per 1,000 live births as against 55.5 for West Germany, 52 for France, 53.4 for Belgium and 31.4 for Britain. A quarter of a century later the situation had changed radically. By 1972, the number was 18.5 for the United States—certainly a great improvement. But for France the number was 16, for Beligum 20.5, West Germany 22.5 and Britain

On Holding The Bag for South Africa

By W.F. Buckley Jr.

N EW YORK—The college stu-dents, here and there, have discovered—or more properly rediscovered—the cause of South African economic disengagement. At a number of colleges, trustees are gathering under student presure to consider whether to empty their portfolios of securities in contrantes with economic ties to South their portfotios of securities in com-panies with economic ties to South Africa. Right away there is the problem of making a distinction. If the trustees are mandated to sell securities in any company doing business in South Africa, they will have to sell any securities they own in 350 major U.S. companies. This is the rough equivalent of comme is the rough equivalent of coming to Manhattan for a visit and bocotting the area bounded by the Hudson River, the East River, 35th Street and 57th Street.

But the problem only begins. The totalists also want the trustees to refuse to buy securities in any U.S. refuse to buy securities in any US companies doing business with South Africa. All that this mandate would require is divesting onesely of shares in 6,000 U.S. companies. It is difficult to know exactly what would be left for the trustees of U.S. colleges to invest in, but if you use your local drug store rise to the height of the Empire State Building, you will know that the idealists triumphed. To be sure, the following year scholarships at U.S. colleges might be reduced by 20 or 30 per cent.

Leaving aside for the moment the demands of the totalists, the socalled Sullivan principles should be more widely advertised. The Rev. Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia a black Baptist, is a director of Gen-eral Motors. He does not believe in economic withdrawal from South Africa. He does believe, however in activist anti-apartheid policies by U.S. firms doing business in South Africa. He has laid down six principles, and as of a week ago, 85 U.S. companies in South Africa have subscribed to these six principles. The idea is that a U.S. company will insist on subscribing in practice to these principles, on the threat of closing down if the South African government denies them permission. They are:

Nonsegregation of the races in all eating, comfort and work facili-

Equal and fair employment practices for all employees.
 Equal pay for all employees doing equal or comparable work for the same period of time.

· An increase io the number of blacks and other nonwhites in management and supervisory positions.

 Improvement in the quality of environment in such areas as housing, transportation, schooling, recreation and health facilities. The thrust of the six principles is admirable. One wishes one might mobilize U.S. idealism to insist on complementary principles to govern U.S. investment, or U.S. economic credits, in the Soviet Union, It would be interesting to observe the reaction of the Soviet Union if U.S. companies and banks involved in subsidizing, say, the Kama River trucking plant were to announce six principles as follows:

All Russians employed by U.S. capital must be given freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of religion, freedom of travel, the right of habeas corpus, the right of public trial by a jury of their

Fortunately—for all its faults—South Africa isn't the Soviet Union. Unfortunately—for all their virtues-U.S. idealists are not inpartial in their hunger for justice.

Still to repeat, the promnigation of the six principles is encouraging and they should be accepted by U.S. opinion as a desirable substitute for the draconian alternatives recommended by the extremists recommended by the extremistrative recommended by the extremistrative president of Brown University in charge of financial affairs has remarked dryly that if the demands of the students were met everywhere in the United States, the South African government would have no alternative other than to embargo the repatriation of Capital.

DARIS, April 25 (IHT)—"I Nuovi Mostri" (at the Elysees Lincoin, the Monte Carlo, the Hautescuille and the Quintette in its original version) is as diverting a movie as the recent months have brought us. The film has more amusing notions than you will eccounter in half a year of movie attendance. It wins laughter naturally, easily, as it scampers along its mischievous wny, exposing with a cynical smirk the hase impulse that motivate the monsters of its human zoo.

Composed of a dozen sketches, it has in its elever narration the gift of the seasoned raconteur. It never lingers on an anecdote, drawing characters and situations swiftly and neatly scoring its points. Three eminent directors—Mario Monicelli, Dino Risi and Ettore Scola—have collaborated on it. Their individual cootributions are oot credited, for they have produced an en-semble work harmonious in its approach and smooth execution.

Trade Surplus Rises For West Germany

WIESBADEN, West Germany. April 25 (AP-DJ)—West Germany's trade surplus last month totaled 4.188 hillion Deutsche marks. up from 2.167 billion DM in February but slightly below the 4.197 billion DM reported in the yearago month, the federal statistics office reported today.

The foreign exchange market reacted calmly to the news though the March bulge was larger than forecast. According to one chief dealer, the figures were "surprisingly high," but he noted that most operators were waiting on the side-lines for the U.S. March trade data. scheduled to he released tomorrow. However, world turnover jumped 12.7 percent to 24.15 billion DM from 21,42 billion DM the previous

"The current year will be similar to last year, both for sales and profits," he said.

He said the company does not plan to drop in 1978 its 1-DM bonus dividend nor the 7-DM regular dividend it paid for 1977.

Mr. Schmuecker termed the results "satisfactory" with the year marking the end of a "consolida-tion" period following losses in 1974 and 1975. He added the company currently has a high level of unfilled orders while incoming order flow is above last year.

For the first quarter of the year, he added, world sales fell 1 percent from a year earlier.

Chief financial officer Friedrich Thomee said the lower 1977 profits were due to higher taxes and the tax break the previous year from a 693-million DM loss carried forrationalization. He said parent-company investment spending in 1978 would total 1.3 billion DM, I billion DM in 1979, 1.2 billion DM in 1980, and 900 million DM in

"For the group, the very rough figures are of the same magnitude," Mr. Thomee said. He said Mexico, Brazil and the United States would be the main investment centers.

In 1977, group investment spending rose 48.7 percent to 1.7 billion DM, up from 1.1 billion DM in 1976.

Mr. Schmuecker said West German market share slipped to 30 percent in the first quarter against 31.4 percent. He acknowledged that there have been bottlenecks in production of Golf models. But, he said, despite the high demand for the Golf, "We can't undertake to increase production" or the company could find itself with unused capacity later.

The current account surplus (including trade, services and transfers) rose sharply to 2.8 billion DM in March, from an upward-revised 700 million DM in February and 2.327 hillion DM in March 1977. For the first three months of the year, the current-account surplus climbed 33 percent to 3.2 hillion DM from 2.4 billion DM a year

A Bundesbank economist ex-plained this jump by pointing out that Wesi Germany's tradinonal deficit on its services account nar-rowed to 300 million DM in the first three months, from nearly 2.6 billion DM in the 1977 quarter. Rio Tinto-Zinc Eyes Joint Ventures

The high cost of developing new mines means that Rio Tinto-Zinc (RTZ) has become increasingly interested in joint ventures, says chairman Sir Mark Turner. One potential partner is Exxon, which re-cently approached the U.K-based mining concern. Exxon first considered the possibility of acquiring an interest in RTZ, but later abandoned that course in favor of participation in joint projects, although in favor of participation in joint projects, although no specific proposals have been put forward yet. The RTZ executive adds his company is not interested in being acquired wholly or in part by another concern. RTZ has committed itself to spend £113 million on various projects this year and it has approved, but not yet committed funding, for projects costing another £221 million. Sir Mark notes that the iron ore outlook for 1978 is "gloomy in the extreme," that there are "some signs of improvement" in zinc prices and that he is "hullish about aluminum over the long haul" because of the energy situation.

He adds that Zenith believes it has retained its market leadership position in the U.S. color television industry through the end of the first quarter. It claims a 22-percent market share for 1977 against 19.7 percent for RCA, its closest companies.

Royal Dutch-Shell Outlook

Royal Dutch-Shell, which achieved a "reasonable level" of earnings last year, expects its 1978 performance will also be "creditable," group treasurer J.H. MacDonald reports. "It would appear that oil trading cannot lonk for any early or dramatic improvement in profitability. Capital spending by the Anglo-Dutch group outside North America is expected to be about $2.8 billion, almost 30 percent above last year, he says. Over $1.3 billion will be invested in oil and say production with the largest invested in oil and gas production, with the largest slice of some $800 million going to the U.K. sector of the North Sea.

Big Board Prices Rise Broadly

New York Stock Exchange prices closed higher today in the second heaviest trading session in Big Board history. Late profit-taking, however, cut in half earlier gains on institutional buying analysts said. The Dow Jones industrial average, up more than 14 points earlier, closed up 7.53 at 833.59. Through Monday, the blue-chip index had climbed 83.94 points from its Feh. 12, 1978 low of 742.12.

Volume totaled 55.8 million shares, up sharply from the 34.51 shares, up sharply from the 34.51 million shares yesterday, and surpassing the second high record of 52,278,180 shares traded April 14. The turnover was short of the all-time record of 63,510,000 shares traded April 17. The first-hour volume of 17.58 million shares was a record, surpassing the 17.48 million shares traded in the first hour April 17.

Advances outnumbered declines

Analysts said that late profit-tak-ing was sparked by U.S. Steel's re-port of a first-quarter loss. Also, investors said some early buyers took their profits and left the market prior to President Carter's news conference. The President said, among other things, that be thinks the recent sharp rise in the stock market is due to the administramarket is due to the administration's "new commitment to fighting

GOLDMAN SACHS CAPABILITY: HELPING COMPANIES LOWER THE COST OF FUNDS WITH COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Goldman Sachs was founded in 1869 as a commercial paper dealer, and we have been the world leader in this form of short-term financing for many years. In 1977, our paper sales exceeded $95 billion and daily outstandings in 1978 have been as high as $10 billion, of which over $1.5 billion is from non-U.S. issuers. Here's how this uncommon capability can help serve the financing needs of your company.

Why commercial paper. The use of commercial paper has grown tenfold in recent years. Total market outstandings, which were $4.6 billion on December 31, 1960, had increased to $66 billion by the end of 1977.

Today, more than 800 major industrial, financial, transportation and utility companies utilize the commercial paper market as part of their short-term financing programs. They find that use of this instrument offers three important advantages:

• Potential savings in interest. Commercial paper rates are generally lower than the bank prime lending rate. And there is no additional compensating balance requirement with paper, allowing the issuer to make full use of his borrowed funds.

Wide range of investors. The issuance of commercial paper by a corporation brings increased exposure of its name and financial standing to a broad spectrum of institutions who are the major investors in these unsecured notes. Such awareness on the part of investors can be important to the success of an issuer's future financing plans.

 Fiexibility. Commercial paper maturities can be tailored to a company's specific cash needs, thus permitting greater flexibility in short-term cash planning than is possible with bankborrowing alone.

Why Goidman Sachs. As the leading dealer in commercial paper, Goldman Sachs has shared in much of the recent growth in the use of this instrument. Last year, for example, we added 15 new issuing clients, and currently represent over 200 leading industrial, commercial, insurance, utility, finance company and governmental issuers.

Our issuers find that Goldman Sachs' skill, experience, and facilities offer four additional advantages:

 Marketing ability. Our commercial paper staff of more than 80 people is located in nine Goldman Sachs offices across the U.S. and overseas. These professionals and support personnel in buying, credit and sales bring our services to issuers and investors wherever they may be located.

Competitive rates. To the best of our knowledge, our rates to commercial paper issuers are equal to or lower than rates charged for comparable maturities elsewhere. Our own issuers, plus studies of borrowing costs incurred by others, confirm that our rates are indeed competitive.

• Communications. We utilize a sophisticated electronic communications system to advise our commercial paper personnel in every office the moment an issue becomes available in the market. This enables our sales force to sell your paper rapidly and efficiently to investors all across the country.

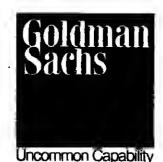

Service capability. When you call our commercial paper department with an immediate borrowing need, the service you receive will be prompt and expert. Each member of this Goldman Sachs team is fully apprised of your borrowing patterns and objectives if you have issued through us before. And each of them is equally prepared to help you if you are a new

For 109 years of experience and professional expertise in helping companies meet short-term financing requirements, call on Goldman Sachs' capability. The uncommon capability that has kept us first in commercial paper.

PERDIDO By Jill Robinson. Alfred A. Knopf. 431 pp. $9.95

DERDIDO in Spanish means
I lost. There is a Spanish song,
"La Nina Perdida," about a father looking for his lost child. There is a lost the book is framed by the Monte Perdido in northeast Spain, one of the peaks of the Pyrene which the French call Mont Perdu, perdu meaning "hidden, concealed, obscured," Both words derive from the Latin perdere, "to lose." See perdition, "a state of final spiritual ruin, loss of the soul." Perdido is also where Susanna Howard lives in Jill Robinson's remarkable, heartbreaking novel: a Hollywood mansion in which everything is hid-den, concealed, obscured. It is from this Perdido that Susanna, the child, will set out to look for her lost father. When she comes back, Perdido will be gone.
We are warned: "I sit under the peach tree which has flowers, but peaches you cannot eat, like the olives which fall like purple marbles from the clive trees and cannot be eaten either. Sometimes a bird eats one of those olives and you find him lying dead in the morning. Poison little green peaches, poison olives, rats in the ivy—and in palm trees for sure—and lizards crushed by tires in the driveway, and to look at it quick, you'd think every-thing was wonderful."

Everything is not wonderful. Everything is fantasy. Hollywood invented itself, as perhaps it "invented the happy American family and put it into movies to drive everyone else crazy." And the children of Hollywood, the sons and daughters of the actors and agents and producers and directors, grew up im-probable dreamers in their make-believe castles, each with its own projection room. Blond-haired and blue-eyed in eternal sunshine, riding their horses over the hills, plunging their bicycles into swimming pools, tooling their sports cars into traffic jams, spiking watermelons with vodka and borrowing clothes for their birthday parties from the costume departments of the studios, how could they not have imagined they were princes and princesses? "This can-not be anyone's real life," thinks Susanna. It woo't last. The time of "Perdido" is from 1950, when Susanna is 14 years old and first meets the actor Jackson Lane, to 1960, when she is 24, unhappily married to another Hollywood child, and sees Jackson for only the third time io her life. These are the years of the blacklist, and the years as well of television, of the collapse of the studio system. The dream factory. from the inside, has oever been better portrayed; its projections amount to a huge denial of various family secrets; the oovel is a series of impoverishing discoveries, of losses. As readers of her harrowing

"Bedimetory" are well aware, Jill Robinson knows how to tell us terrible things io a furny tone of voice. The humor is edgy, defensive, self-punishing; I am laughing, it says, to keep from biting you. Susanna, asthmatic, wisecracking, sex-obsessed, on the road with her guitar looking for her father, makes us root for her while fearing the worst. A child of Hollywood expects a happy ending, it's supposed to come with the franchise; closeup, fade-out, in a fairy tale made by machines. It will not be permitted.

two appearances of Jackson in the smlight so it is balanced by the two death-dealing fires. Because cars are throughout in dangerous motion, we wait for the accident. The weather itself is a character: We know the truth about Jackson when he is standing, not in the sun-light of southern California, but in the snow of New Hampshire, as if reality were somewhere else—the East, or Florida, or Illinois, outside the studios. This artfulness extends to the particulars: the grown-up children, like Paul, too small to wear the skins of their dead fathers; the women who miraculously survive, with "sporty competence"; the hos-pitals and the bedrooms. Susanna's sexual fantasies (and the acting out of them) are more convincing than anything similar in recent fiction without the flora and fauna and swamp gas that many liberated female novelists seem to have appropriated from D. H. Lawrence and his clone, Norman Mailer. The strongest character in the book, aside from Susanna, is her brilliant cousin and best friend, Val. How to convey brilliance? I don't know, but Jill Robinson does, especially in a stunning scene in which Val while writing a song, explains her father's suicide.

(I suppose Val is based on the late Johanna Mankiewicz Davis. She certainly sounds like the Jose Davis who wrote the novel "Life Signs," and dies the same senseless death. We know from Brooke Hayward's "Haywire" that Josie Mankiewicz, Jill Schary, Jane Fonda and Brooke Hayward, all chil-dren of Hollywood, used to ride together, looking for Marlon Brando, not finding him. It doesn't: matter.) Susanna dreams a movie ending for herself, a wish against a death, a vote for love. This novel is so pow erful that I almost believed that

At this point, one should consider what lead he would make from the West hand against four spades doubled, and whether this would serve to defeat the contract.

In practice, West made the obvious lead of the club jack and South took his ace. He led trumps, and West took his ace on the second round and returned a trump. South pulled the last trump and led his singleton heart.

West was helpless. He ducked, and South won in the dummy with the jack. He led the heart king and threw a club, leaving West in trouble again when he won with the ace. Whatever he did at this point, South was safe for 10 tricks, losing ooe trump trick and major-suit

At first sight, it seems that West is sure to take two aces and diamond tricks. But that is never posmond tricks. But that is never possible. He can beat game by playing diamonds early, and presenting declarer with a trick in that suit. By continuing diamonds before his trumps are removed. West leaves the declarer without any hope of reaching the dummy and with una voidable losers in his own hand. The opening lead of a diamond honor will achieve this result, and so will the lead of the heart are if so will the lead of the heart ace if followed by a high diamond.

How to Tame an Arch-Villain

By Rob Hughes

LONDON, April 25 (IHT)-Does the professional sportsman have a mind of his own? That question is prompted wherever you look, or rather listen, in soccer these days. Sample: Why did so many Brazilian players foresake their skills on the tour of Europe and, particularly against England, commit so many unseemly fouls? Answer (allowing for translation): "We execute what tactics Coutinho [the manager] tells us. We try to carry out the team Sample: Whatever happened in one year to turn Kenny Burns, the Scotland and Nottingham Forest defender, from arch-villain into the man voted England's "footballer of the year" by the sportswriters. An swer (from the horse's mouth) You should ask Mr. Clough, It all down to him and Peter Taylor.

Since everyone in Europe is by now well and truly bored by the frustrating experience of seeing Brazil, so obviously talented yet so wantonly committed still to tryin to avenge the disgraceful foul tackles that destroyed them in Eng land in 1966, let us take a close

Not for the Faint of Heart

Readers of a squeamish disposi tion might like to skip this nex paragraph. The young Ken Burns nicknamed Concorde because of his rather large, hooked nose, be gan his apprenticeship with Glas gow Rangers. It was very bnef, quite brutal. Rangers are not known to be too bothered with problem children if they can play a bit, but Burns was too hot for them; he was sent off five times in successive matches, his temper was to say the least uncontrollable and, like the worst of the Italians, he tended to spit at opponents.

Things were never that bad afterward, but at Brimingham City, his first English club, Burns was tacking another player in training and, in January, 1976, his own manager, Willie Bell, a fellow Scot, took the unprecedented step nf "sending off" his player after he brawled with an opponent. Later still Burns was again disciplined by the club for committing the worst professional foul in the book—a calculated tackle over the top of the ball to strike an opponent's shinsthat was replayed on television.

At this time, Birmingham could nnt decide even his best position.

Clough will say there is no secret to persuading players to control their manners on the field, especially players endowed with the gift of insight for reading the pattern of play that Burns has. The answer lies in two things: First that Clough unhesitatingly fines any player whom he considers to have stepped out of line—and the fines are not petty; second that not only the management, but also the players at Nottingham Forest, have repeat-edly shown their appreciation of Burns's good behavior—and his talent. Women's Movies

NEW YORK—In their original form, women's movies made women in the audience weep and men snore. In the end the woman got the man. He was usually George Brent. Brent was a natty dresser with natty hair and a natty moustache. Though he seemed value in a delicate condition, she has moustache. Though he seemed vaguely engaged in one of the uptown professions—law, medicine, architecture—the real point of his existence was to be got in the end. always felt pity for Brent, or as much pity as one man can feel for another whose moustache is natty. In retrospect, I ealize that this was because Brent had been reduced to what feminist jargon now calls "a sex object." Instead of being permitted to romp in desert sands, knocking off Bedouins with Victor McLaglen and the other fellows, he was forced to wait around drawing rooms holding the bandkerchief for Bette Davis, Barhara Stanwyck or Joan Crawford.

Women must feel the same way about the women they see in men's movies. Men's movies haven't changed much over the years. A hunch of guys all get together on a boat, or on horses, or in a fort or a castle or a trench, and everybody has a swell time punching jaws and wielding cutlery and firearms.

In their early form, such women as appeared in these movies existed only to be got at the end of the mayhem. Now that the courts have freed the film arts of prudish censorship, such women exist only to be got periodically whenever the boys have to take a hreather from the fraternal capers.

Women's movies, however, seem to have evolved more interestingly. Influenced perhaps by the unisexu-al trend, they have taken on some of the characteristics of men's mov-

Men exist chiefly to be abandoned, seduced, shot or shoved out of camera range hy women when the plot begins to thicken. The change can be illustrated if we study an old-style men's movie like daughter alone. surrounded by men who wear sheets and poison the water supply. In a cool, dark room the hattal-ion surgeon, a man with a natty moustache, completes his examination. He is the younger hrother of the Earl of Earwig and has fled to this pesulential camel-stop to es-cape the disgrace of scandal occa-sioned when he appeared in the Connaught Hotel har one night without his moustache.

They have fallen desperately in love, hut he is too much of an earl to tell her and she is too ladylike to make the first move. Moreover, when he tells her that her delicate condition is actually a fatal hrain tumor, the announcement causes so many close-ups of her attempt to suppress the tears that there is no room for dialogue after she asks. 'How long do I have?"

Modern Version: Discovering that her hushand is playing around with secretaries, the heroine walks out of her Upper West Side apart-ment and takes her 10-year-old daughter to a fort in the Sahara where she finds a group of uncouth louts oppressing the natives. On the caravan from Tunis, she has met Fatima a curiously inarticulate woman who expresses herself hy drawing pictures of nude men in

The Vatican Express to Expedite Mail

By Louis B. Fleming

R OME—An American businessman was surprised to receive a letter from the Vatican the other day. It was not a pontifical message, but a hill from a company in Rome.

The company had discovered, along with hundreds of others, that the fastest mail from Rome goes by way of the Vatican.

Today's service from the Holy See is part of a tradition that put popes in the postal husiness long before the Pony Express and Wells Fargo.

The Vatican has been in the mail husiness, off and on, for seven centuries, but it took the jet age to establish the usefulness of the system for those outside the walls of the Vatican.

Those who criticize the unresponsiveness that sometimes characterizes the hureaucracy of the Holy See would be astonished at its communications system, which includes an independent telegraph service and pneumatic tubes that can deliver messages quickly throughout the huildings of Vatican City.

Yet the "postmaster general" has never studied the mail husiness and never made the rounds as a mailman. He is, in fact, a priest whose preference is for teaching Italian literature and religious

"The main reason for our speed is that we sort and send out everything we receive each day," the Rev. Angelo Cordischi said. A Contrast

That may sound routine for some postal systems around the world, hut it contrasts with the Italian system, which has been troubled for a decade with labor disputes complicated by transportation troubles.

There is another advantage for the Vatican: Its service is relatively small. The post office itself looks more like a country post office than the central operation of a national postal system. In an average year it handles about 2 million letters, 2 million pieces an average year it handles about 2 million letters, 2 million pieces of printed matter, 6 million postcards and 15,000 packages.

Father Cordischi supervises all this from a quiet office in the post and telegraph building within the Vatican walls. The building itself is not open to the public. But a hranch post office, alongside the great piazza before the Basilica of St. Peter's, is open to the public. It is augmented seasonally by a portable post office in a modern trailer that is moved into the piazza.

How did this priest and schoolteacher get into the post-office husiness?

"In a religious way, hy obedience," he replies with a smile. He belongs to the Sons of the Divine Providence, an order with a special commitment to serving the pope. When the joh of inspector in charge of the post and telegraph service opened in 1972, he was called. And he has learned fast. Our history dates hack to the 14th century, when couriers on horseback used to carry pontifical mail," the Rev. Cordischi said.

Mail service in Italy spans almost 2 millennia

"There was organized postal service at the time of the Roman Empire." Vittorio Plini, head of the Vatican philatelic office, said. He has looked back at the early days of postal service and marveled at the problems and inconveniences before the introduction of postage stamps. The Vatican issued its first stamp in 1852. Time of Romans

"At the time of the Romans, the mail service carried only state orders and state letters." Plini said. "Most of that correspondence was cut on wax tablets. Private mail was carried exclusively hy traveling merchants."

By the 19th century, however, the Vatican had a highly organized mail service in operation. Messengers on horseback sped from station to station, with changes of horses available en route. But there were also services with two-wheel wagons and, later, enclosed four-wheel stagecoaches, drawn by teams of four horses enclosed four-wheel stagecoaches, drawn by teams of four horses and carrying passengers as well as mail.

All this ended ahruptly in 1870, when Pope Pius IX surrendered to the victorious armies of Italy. The unified nation of Italy was born and the popes retreated behind the walls of the Vatican, not to emerge for 59 years.

With the end of papal sovereignty over the surrounding states of Italy, the postal system was abandoned.

But when the Vatican came to terms with Mussolini in 1929 and the Lateran Pact was signed, there were specific provisions to re-establish a Vatican postal service. It has heen flourishing ever since

For the Holy See, the postal service, through the sale of stamps, contributes to income as well as prestige. About 60 per cent of the stamps in each issue are immediately sold abroad to collectors and are not used as postage. That amounts to a considerable amount of money. The most recent issues, for example, of 1.15 million stamps, a pair commemorating Pope Paul VI's 80th hirth-day, had a face value of 750 lire, which means that the income from sales to collectors was in excess of $600,000. So important is the sale of Vatican stamps to collectors that the philatelic office maintains direct mailings to private collectors as well as dealers to alert them on new issues of stamps and on the 200 million lire in coins issued each year. The office encourages private collectors to add their names to the mailing list. West Germany is the largest customer of Valican stamps, fol-lowed by the United States and then the other Western European

There also is close cooperation between the Vatican and Italy on the handling of mail. Officially, all Vatican mail passes through the Italian postal service, but in practice the Vatican expedites the mail with direct delivery.

This makes for a delicate relationship and, at the Vatican, great relationship and the Vatican and Italian and It reluctance to make any comparison in service. But an Italian postal official candidly acknowledged the inability of the public service to equal the Vatican's standards of speed and efficiency. C Los Angeles Times

Ford 'Proud' of Wife For Public Struggle

Gerald Ford said that he is "darned proud" of his wife Betty's public battle to overcome her drug and alcohol problem. "She's mak-ing great progress" in a California hospital, he said in New York on a television program. "She will be a lot stronger and a lot healthier in the future as a result." he said. He also said the Ford family only rec-ognized Mrs. Ford's problem in re-cent months. "I was comfortable as long as she was comfortable. We didn't push her. She made the decididn't push her. She made the decision, which was very important from her point of view for recovering." Praising the Long Beach, Calif., naval facility, Ford said that the treatment includes lectures which help patients and their families see "what the end result is if you don't do something affirmative. It not only educates the tive...It not only educates the patient, but it also educates the family. "I was there five days out of the last seven last week. And we would go from 8 o'clock in the morning until 10 or 11 o'clock at night_lectures and discussions. It's an exceptionally well-done program and I hope the other services will do the same. I hope there will be a hroadening of this type of treatment for civilians.

"It makes you think a little,"
Ford said. "An awful lot of fine people in this country, including my wife Betty, have this problem.
And there are many, many people in public life who have this same problem. And there is a cure, there is a way to control it. I just hope others face up to it as Betty did."

The Broadway production of "King Lear," starring Richard Bur-ton and directed by Elia Kazan, that was scheduled for next season has been canceled. The reason was a disagreement between Burton and Alexander Cohen, its producer, over the number of performances that were to have been given per week. Burton wanted six; Cohen. seven. "It is financially impossible to operate a major Broadway pro-duction from the receipts of only six performances a week." Cohen said.
